Question to openai.com ChatGPT on 2/10/2023:

How should one care for a foundling of uncertain age weighing about 25 pounds and apparently in good health?

ChatGPT Response:

If you have found a child or infant who appears to be healthy, the first step is to ensure their safety and well-being. Here are some steps you can take:

1. Contact the authorities: Report the foundling to the local police or child protective services immediately. They will be able to help determine the next steps for the child's care and ensure that they are placed in a safe environment.
2. Provide basic needs: In the meantime, make sure the child has food, water, clothing, and shelter if necessary. You can also provide comfort and support to the child, but avoid becoming too attached as they may be reunited with their family.
3. Seek medical attention: Take the child to a doctor or medical professional to assess their health and address any immediate needs. The doctor will also be able to determine the child's age and provide information that can be helpful in reuniting them with their family.
4. Keep records: Make a note of any information you have about the child, such as the date and place you found them, their physical appearance, and any other relevant details. This information could be helpful in locating the child's family.

It's important to keep in mind that the well-being of the foundling is the top priority and that it's important to follow the guidance and instructions of the relevant authorities.

Feedback: thumb up. This answer is almost perfect. ChatGPT could have added that if possible, one should take photos of the child and their surroundings for documentation.
